

THE VELDON GROUP

ORGANISATIONAL PROFILE

The Veldon Group is a new and unique platform for the delivery of major projects in Queensland and across Australia.

The Veldon organisation is comprised of a diverse range of long-established, specialised service providers – who have all known one another and worked together for many years; and who are also Veldon shareholders. These organisations are privately owned, Queensland companies who have come together with a shared purpose and vision to create a new mode of EPC contracting, characterised by a hardworking, pragmatic approach to project execution where the collective focus is the exceptional delivery of projects for its clients.

This means Veldon's service offering is rich in content and fully integrated, from project conception to execution to transformation. In addition to the traditional 'design and construct' offering, our suite of services includes feasibility studies, land access services (native title and cultural heritage) environmental planning and approvals, operations support and disturbed land closure and repurposing – with all services supported by an ESG capability embedded within every phase of the project. The Veldon Group is committed to the support of the decarbonisation of the global economy, with a commensurate focus on projects within the renewables, critical minerals, bio-products and supporting infrastructure sectors.

The Veldon contracting and project delivery model is refreshing and unique.

Veldon service providers are also shareholders who are completely aligned and incentivised to ensure that projects are delivered successfully. All member companies are specialists in their individual fields, with successful track records in delivering major, complex projects, sometimes under highly onerous contracting conditions. Veldon members work in a totally integrated fashion from project tendering, to project design, and project execution. We will work with the client's team to ensure the project can be built and operated seamlessly and efficiently.

The Veldon contracting model observes the principle of an equitable apportionment of risk and reward between client and contractor – and its collaborative approach with its clients throughout every phase of the project will ensure that project risk and outcomes are optimised. Clients will quickly come to appreciate the Veldon experience – a transformed approach to contracting which will forever change the traditional EPC model characterised by an adversarial, high-cost, non-transparent approach to project delivery.

While the Veldon organisation and its contracting model is new, our delivery platform is mature and tested – comprised of successful, hardworking companies who know and trust one another – and who always put the best interests of the project first.

Welcome to Veldon! We look forward to working with you.
